Which Fleece do you need?

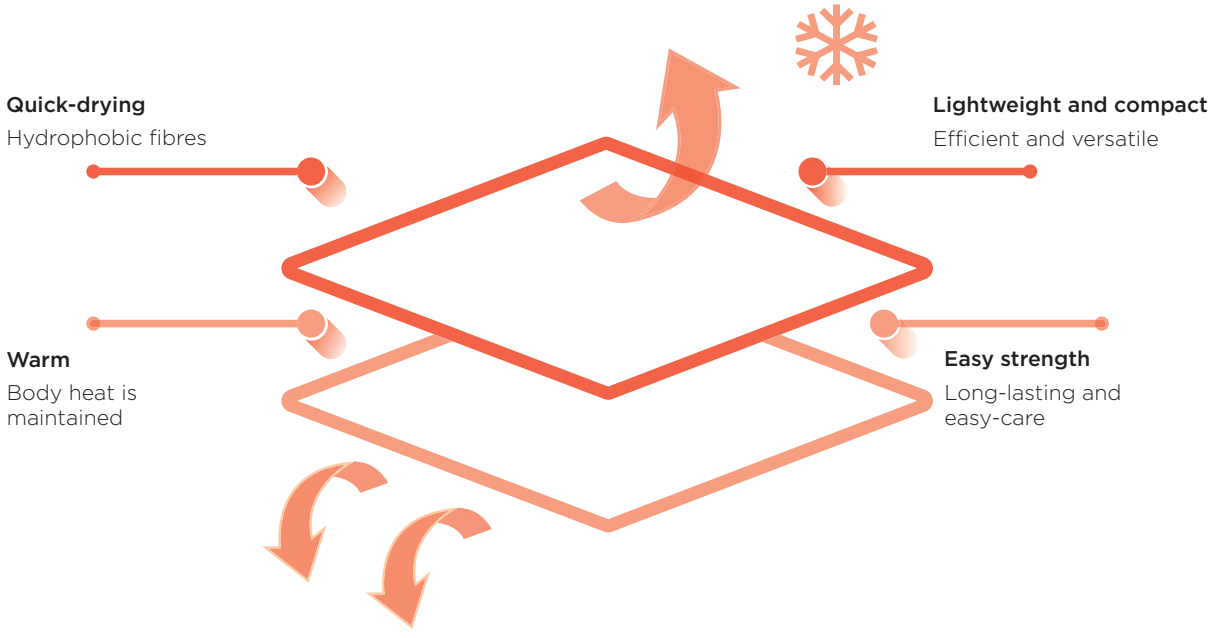

POLAR FLEECE : INSULATION EVEN WHEN WET

Polar fleece is the thickest of all the different types of fleeces available on the market and is hydrophobic. Even when the material is wet, it retains most of its insulating qualities. The fabric is machine washable and dries quickly.

MICRO FLEECE: IDEAL FOR MID-SEASON OUTERWEAR

Micro fleece is thin, extremely lightweight, super soft, and provides an effective level of insulation. The fabric is ideal for outerwear in milder weather or as a mid-layer in combination with a jacket or bodywarmer.

How to Choose a Softshell Jacket

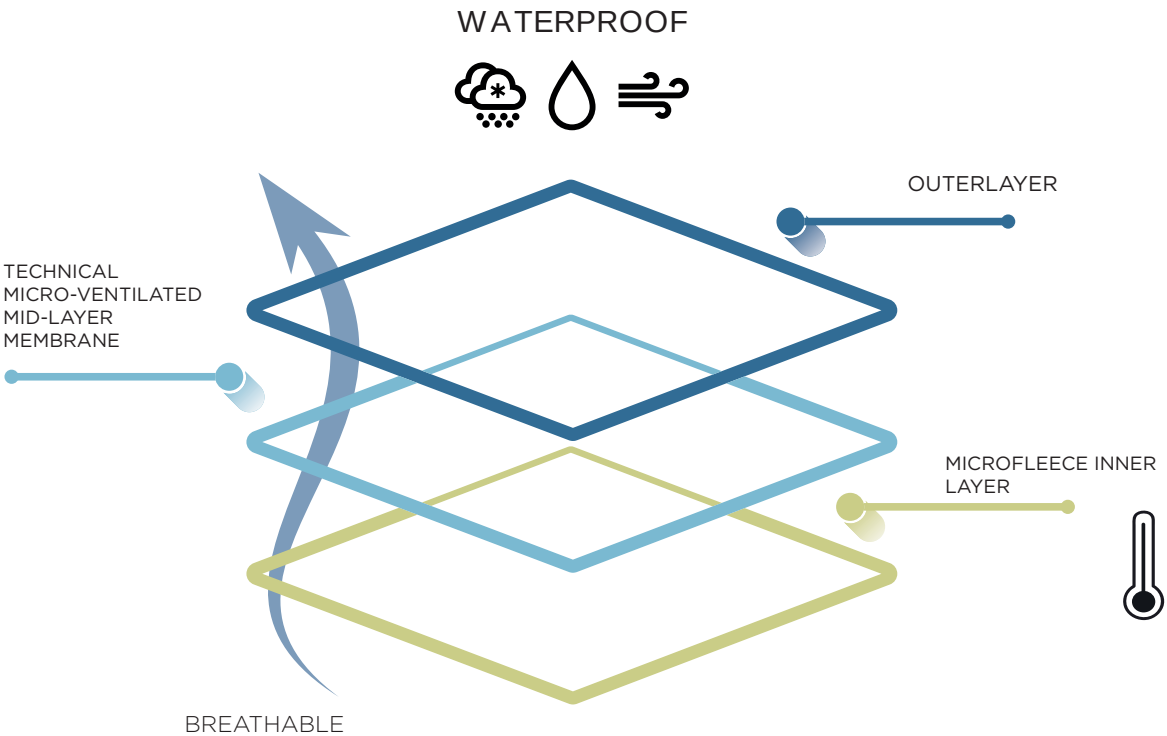

A softshell is a versatile jacket that is suitable for many outdoor activities, but which type should you choose?

2-LAYER SOFTSHELL

Made from a woven material, unlike conventional jackets a softshell jacket does not have a lining but instead is made by bonding layers of fabric together. The number of layers determines the performance of the jacket – more layers deliver more technicality.

DTC
SOLE TECHNOLOGY

DICKIES TECHNOLOGY
CEMENTED SOLE

Designed and developed by Dickies to provide supreme grip on smoother surfaces, DTC has a two colour abrasion resistant outsole, moulded using premium rubber, bonded to a light weight cushioning EVA (Ethylene-vinyl acetate) midsole.

The rubber outsole has an effective substance of 6mm, meaning that there is sufficient material to prevent wear through to the midsole during the life of the product. This can't be said for many of its competitors! It also includes a toe bumper for additional protection and the low profile gives it a sporty look.

The geometric tread pattern efficiently disperses liquid and eliminates the effects of aquaplaning, providing constant ground contact in wet conditions. Deeper cleats around the perimeter of the tread design provide traction on more uneven surfaces.

DTC performs to the highest slip resistance standards, well above SRC minimums. Flexibility is provided by ergonomically designed flex grooves.
